Chapter 1 by The Book of Stories

With the war paint, sniper rifle, and military clothes, you would think that this was an ordinary war hero.

Not one person would think this hero was a kitten.

She was a cat, until recently.

The government had let out a strong gas that was meant to wipe out everyone in the world except for them, so they'd have it all to themselves.

There was a flaw in the gas.

It had caused average animals to form into humans, except birds.

The gas had also polluted the air, making it very hard to breathe for an Ordinary, along with the extinction of aerial lifeforms.

Also, you could get radiation from just sitting in a spot without proper equipment.

Even though the government, CA (Central Authority of Anarchy in People's Environment) failed with the gas, they still need World War 2 on the world.

That's where the the human animal figures come into action.

They were a main key to fighting the CAPE, since they can adapt to such harsh environments and have specials humans don't have.

So, we're back at the Kitten who was about to snipe Forcers of CAPE, who were people who envaded homes to execute any lifeforms.

The Kitten loaded the gun, waiting for the perfect timing to end the treacherous lives of the CAPE
